PET CARE GUIDELINES – POST MICROCHIPPING PROCEDURE

Adverse reactions to microchips or post-procedure complications are extremely rare but can occur. A small hole is left in the skin after a microchip has been implanted, which needs about 24 hours to completely heal.

YOU can help to avoid any complications by:

- Taking your pet home and let him/her have a quiet day.
- Do not take your pet for a long walk (or run) for the rest of the day.
- Try not to let your pet get over-excited.
- Limit your pet’s exercise – no rough play or playing ball for 24 hours.
- If a cat, keeping your cat indoors for the rest of the day.
- Not using your dog’s harness for walking or in the car for 24 hours.
- Not giving your pet a bath or let your pet go swimming for 24 hours.
- Not letting your pet roll around in the dirt for 24 hours.
- Not applying any flea treatments or tropical preparations to the microchipped area for 24 hours.
- Do not rub or prod the insertion area for at least 24 hours as this may cause the microchip to dislodge.
- Keep an eye on the insertion area for any signs of swelling, bleeding or irritation. If you notice any of these symptoms, seek veterinary advice immediately.

MICROCHIPPING

Microchipping is the insertion of a permanent electronic identification device into the animal. Each microchip has a unique number which provides permanent identification and lifetime registration for your pet. Within the next 7 days you will receive an email from DACO (and another from Global Micro Animal Registry if you have chosen this option) which will allow you to download the details your council needs to register your pet with them. The microchip number can be read with a microchip scanner by vets, shelters or councils. The unique microchip number can be traced back to the appropriate registry where your details and that of your pet are stored. If your pet is lost anywhere in South Australia (or Australia if you choose the Global Micro option as well) your contact details can be accessed 24/7 by authorised authorities to help in returning your loved one home.
